WOMEN ENTREPRENEUR

Meet Mizoram village's only BBA grad who is now building a tea estate, supporting 300 farmers

By Tenzin Norzom

September 23, 2021

After running small errands, Lalthamuani has now set up Eco Far, a tea business that empowers and supports the livelihood of over 300 farmers in Mizoram's Leisenzo village.

According to a study by Google and Bain & Company, women entrepreneurship has a direct impact on women empowerment and overall economic development, leading to the creation of 150-170 million new jobs.

In Leisenzo village, which is about 50km away Champhai district in Mizoram, 22-year-old woman entrepreneur Lalthamuani is proving the positive ripple effects of entrepreneurship. Braving poverty and gender stereotypes in the village, she made ends meet by selling household products and became the first person ever from her village to obtain a BBA degree.

Now, the young entrepreneur runs Eco Far that sells unique tea native to Leisenzo village, and is empowering more than 300 farmers by supporting their livelihood during the pandemic.

In 2020, Lalthamuani won the Pandemic Innovative Challenge organised by the Planning and Program Implementation Department of the Government of Mizoram. She was also among the finalists at the Start Up India Mizoram Yatra and Mizoram Kailawn 2019, a business plan contest organised by the government of Mizoram to promote entrepreneurship.

The journey

For Lalthamuani, the inspiration for running a business came from her mother who used to sell vegetables from door to door. So, when her family was unable to support her high school studies in Sikkim, she began selling household products to support herself.

HER STORY

Lalthamuani

Founder, Eco Far

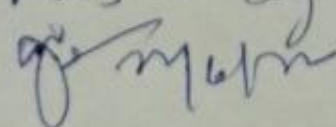

To further continue pursuing Bachelors of Business Administration in 2018, she founded Eco Far through which she sold sustainable daily utility products like recycled and decorated bottles, and took up some network marketing jobs as well.

With fewer job opportunities and economic activity during the pandemic, farmers who were producing tea only for their consumption till now turned to Lalthamuani – the only person with formal business education in the village – to help them market their tea products.

That is when Eco Far pivoted into a tea estate business early this year.

Although she never sold tea before, the entrepreneur hails from a long line of tea farmers, with an estate that was handed down from her ancestors. “My grandmother often told me that the jungle tea grown here is unique and one ought to become successful making a business out of it with the right skill set,” she recalls in a conversation with HerStory.

Operating on a B2C model through retailers outside the village, Eco Far’s flagship product is a handmade ‘jungle red tea’ that is fast selling in the market. The enterprise now hopes to soon introduce white tea and green tea as well. It also sells directly via social media and supplies to the Ministry of Tribal Affairs, as well as companies in Assam, Dimapur, and Kolkata, among others. At present, it sells about 500 tea pouches in two months.

1. Please give us a brief overview of your personal and family background – including family, education and career?

I was born in 14 February 1999 and brought up at a small village named Leisenzo located in the border of India and Myanmar where I completed my elementary studies. My father is a farmer growing ginger and apples. I finished BBA from Mizoram University in 2021.

While studying BBA course, I was among the finalist in Start Up India Mizoram Yatra in 2018. I was also the finalist in Mizoram Kailawn 2019, a business plan contest, which is an initiative by Govt of Mizoram through its New Economic Development Policy to promote entrepreneurship in the state. I am the winner of Pandemic Innovative Challenge organized by Planning & Program Implementation Department of Govt of Mizoram in the year 2020. I support my education from prize money and other funding that I won from this competition.

I started a firm named 'Eco Far' producing and marketing variety of products while in the college through which I won these competitions. I met Mr. PB Lalrinfela during these competitions who was also among the competitors. Together we founded a brand named 'Tribeland' in 2019, manufacturing three varieties of coffee.

However, it is my firm 'Eco Far' I am pushing forward these days. This Eco Far extend its business in manufacturing and processing Jungle Tea, based in my native village in the India- Myanmar border. I formed a society named 'Leisenzo Tea Society' in this village, in which I am a chairman, so that the village people can have a sustainable employment by supplying jungle tea leaves to my Eco Far Tea Factory. My firm Eco Far is now empanelled by the Ministry of Tribal Affairs, GoI to supply the jungle tea products and this Ministry is in the process of sponsoring my Leisenzo Tea Society for training the society members.
